NEXT TIME, THE FINAL CHAPTER OF
"THE TWIN DRAGONS OF SABERTOOTH"

SOME EXPLANATIONS

FIRST OF ALL THANKS FOR READING THIS CHAPTER!

Hello! I am Variations, the scanner of this manga.

There were some awkward phrasing in this chapter, if you haven't noticed, that are caused by the difference in the languages of Japanese and English.

First one's on Page 5 in this panel, I resorted to translating literally in the second speech bubble here because I really couldn't think of a good substitute that clearly represents what it's saying. The "fearless" here can also mean "importance" and the "feelings" can mean multiple things, including "love", "emotion", and "wishes". While in context it can be translated as "there's a difference between our love for -dragons-", it can be also interpreted as "the importance we place on dragons" or "how much we value dragons" since Sting is talking about how his enemy only wants the "power".

In Japanese, the characters used here are 大 (big). This one always comes to life me in the butt because I can never really translate it, while in most situations, it means "big" and "large", something describing size, in this situation it is describing Sting and Rogue. He is not stating that Sting and Rogue are corpulent, rather he is saying how 'great' and 'powerful' they are.

At the same time, it can also mean 'accepting' or 'open-minded'. But in this case, I went with 'great'. I thought the word 'great' might cause some misunderstanding since 'how great' can mean different things too. He's not saying 'how great', I want that! He's just commenting on how strong the twin dragons are.

THANKS FOR TOLERATING ME.
I HOPE THIS CLEARS SOME THINGS UP!
